MILLSAPS MOOT COURT CONVENES FOR THE FIRST TIME THIS SEASON

B. B. Evans Acquitted on Charge of Killing Richard Roe—Welch and Holden Argue Case.

Last Monday night the Millsaps Moot Court assembled for the first time this year in the Galloway Society Hall. Judge Ricketts, the regular judge for the Moot Court, being absent, the chair was filled by Judge Holden of the Supreme Court.

The case as stated was: Indictment against B. B. Evans for the murder of Richard Roe. The attorneys for the State were Welch and Langford; for the defendant were Holden, Jr. and Hilzen. On going to trial, after the indictment was read to him, Evans plead not guilty. Holden, then argued for the defendant, and Welch represented the State.

The cause for the murder of Roe originated at a dance given by Sallie Grimes at which Roe and Evans' younger brother, Charlie, quarreled over who should dance with the hostess. The quarrel ended with a fight in which Charlie Evans was badly wounded by a cut from Roe, who later, that same night was killed by B. B. Evans.

Evans Excited.

During the trial, H. H. Evans was the main witness. The lawyers representing the State made it a point to cross-question him as much as possible. And it was generally conceded by those in the court room that their efforts were not in vain. A few instances of Evans' excitement will suffice: Evans said he was facing Roe and at the same time stabbed him in his back; Evans claimed that Charlie, his brother, was cut four inches and that it required eight stitches.

New Point in Law.

Evans first plead not guilty, but after the cross-question examination by the State, he plead guilty. The jury then retired and returned a verdict of not guilty. This unprecedented verdict was regarded as a new point in law.

Judge Holden complimented the class on their work, and the young lawyers on the way they handled their case.

PROF. HARRELL READS AN ARTICLE ON "INSTRUMENTS OF PRECISION."

Brashear, the Famous Physicist, is Topic of Discussion.

Last Tuesday morning Prof. Harrell read an article on "Instruments of Precision" to his Junior Physics Class. The greater part of the article was taken up with an account of the great work that has been done by John A. Brashear in the field of science.

Brashear started in life as a mill-wright in Pittsburg, and today he is the head of a great concern of that city known the world over for its manuafcture of "instruments of precision." The young mill-wright was an enthusiast in astronomy, his genius having been fired when he was a child by having looked through a telescope at the heavenly bodies. And so he put up a little shop at home in order that he might work at night on a telescope he planned to make. Of course the greater part of the work was the grinding of the lens. In this his wife gave what

THE SENIOR GEOLOGY CLASS TAKES A TRIP TO COLUMBUS

Dr. Sullivan Lectures to Class. Practical Instruction Great.—I. I. & C. Girls Entertain Class Royally.

The Senior Geology Class took its second trip for practical instruction last week.

The class left Wednesday morning for Columbus. From the railroad Dr. Sullivan pointed out the various formations. After passing the Jackson formation, the Vicksburg formation was crossed at Brandon, and then the Claiborne, the ridge hills through which the railroad tunnel west of Meridian is cut. After leaving Meridian the Wilcox formation was crossed which occupies a large area in the northern part of the state and is one of the best water bearing formations. At Sucarnotchee they crossed a narrow strip of the Midway formation, after which the trip extended along the Selma until Columbus was reached. The exposure of the chalky Selma (the socalled rotton limestone) was very noticeable from the train and presented quite a contrast to the green sands of the Eutaw formation along the Tombigbee at Columbus.

The I. I. & C. Gelogy Class with their teacher, Miss Frances Hooper, met the Millsaps crowd at the train Wednesday evening and took the young ladies out to the college, while the men were entertained at the home of the Rev. W. S. Duren, who is a graduate of Millsaps and who won a medal in the M. I. O. A. contest while here.

Thursday morning the I. I. & C. Geology Class joined the Millsaps class and they managed to fill two picnic wagons and drove five miles up the river to the famous Plymouth Bluff which rises some sixty feet on the west bank of the river. The eroded surfaces on the bluff were studied first from which a large collection of fossils, including shark's teeth, fish vertebrae and other remains of extinct species were obtained. The huge shells of the exogyra oysters were suggestive of something else besides fossil hunting and with appetites well whetted they sat down to a real picnic dinner

GALLOWAYS DEBATE THE LIQUOR LAW

A. W. Garraway, Ex-Member of Society, Makes Short Talk.

The regular meeting of the Galloway Society was called to order last Friday night with a large attendance and several visitors.

The orator, Mr. A. P. Harmon, was detained from the Society on account of other business ,and the declaimer, H. M. McDonald served double duty, reproducing from memory a beautiful poem.

The question for regular debate was then read by the secretary: Resolved, "That the one-quart liquor law should be abolished." Mr. H. M. Wells appeared as the first speaker on the affirmative and delivered a strong argument; he was followed by C. C. Bullock, first on the negative, who also brought out a strong refutation. The other speakers were Messrs. J. H. Sells and C. A. Ellis, respectively. Both sides displayed a thorough knowledge of the question, but the negative was given the decision.

REV. R. L. WALKUP ADDRESSES Y. M. C. A.

Large Number of Students Hear Splendid Address.

On last Friday evening Rev. R. L. Walkup made a splendid talk to a large audience in the Y. M. C. A. room. Mr. Walkup is Secretary of the Southern division of the Presbyterian Sunday School and a very strong man. So we were very fortunate in securing him to lead the Y. M. C. A. on this occasion. He took for his text a part of the twelfth chapter of Luke and compared the school boy who trys to obtain power and wealth, and knowledge for his own sake to the man of the Scripture who was storing up his goods for himself for some future day, but whose soul was suddenly snatched away from him. He pleaded with the students to try to obtain all of these things, not for selfish ends, but for the good of their fellow man and for God.

He said that His mission was not that of a social reformer, but that he came to get men to carry spiritual relations into all social activities and into all relations of life.

His entire address was clear and to the point, and was well fitted for the occasion. Everyone present thoroughly enjoyed his address and we feel sure that it had much weight. Mr. Walkup is a man who knows boys and knows how to get near them. We are sure that our Y. M. C. A. could not have had a better speaker to address us.

Powell (Looking at some Fraternity jewelry): "I want this ring."

Salesman: "Alright, what size finger?"

Powell: "I don't know. I want it for another finger."

Ainsworth—"Boys, what day does Thanksgiving Thursday come on?"

The Bunch—"The thirtieth."

"Oh, I thought it was like Easter Sunday, come during the week."

BUFKIN HEADS JUNIOR CLASS.

Allred Urges Class to Select Next Year's Annual Staff.

At a meeting of the Junior Class held Tuesday morning the following officers were elected: President, W. E. Bufkin; Vice-President, W. B. Gates; Secretary, Miss Mary Etta Cavett; Treasurer, Miss Fannie Virden; Historian, Miss Elise Moore, and Honor Council, Charles Ventress.

So far as can be learned, there was no one elected to either of the important offices of Class Poet and Class Liar. On inquiry, the Purple and White reporter was informed that poets were born and not made, and that there were no liars in the Junior Class. That, however, being purely a matter of individual opinion, it is left to the discretion of the reader.

Judson Allred, the President of the Junior Class of last year, who presided over the meeting, urged that before the session was over some steps should be taken toward the selection of the next year's annual staff. This is a good suggestion, and, no doubt, will be carried out.

Co-ed (at the wedding): "How do you like your new dress?"

Bridesmaid: "All right only it is a little short of my expectations."

Co-ed: "Yes, I noticed in the style book the expectations are short."

Bowers—"Why is a joke like a nut?"

Case—"You mean Freshman like a nut?"

Wells—"Instead—Why is a Freshman a nut? For instance. Nuts Bowers?"

What's going to happen? No discussion of politics.

assistance he needed. He worked for three years on his first five-inch lens. He next tried a twelve-inch lens. It took him two years to complete it and then it was broken. He refused to be discouraged, however, and turned immediately to the manufacture of another. He attracted the attention of the head of the Alleghany Observatory who was observing the sun with rock-salt lenses. These lenses had to be gotten in Paris and had to be sent back there frequently to be polished. Finally this work was turned over to John A. Brashear and this was the beginning of that factory from which the lens used in the Observatory at Millsaps came.

The John A. Brashear works in Pittsburg is now one of the two plants in the United States where instruments of precision are made. The other is at Cambridge, Mass. In these two shops many wonderful instruments are made. They make plane surfaces accurate to the two hundred and fifty thousandth part of a hair's-breadth. Here are made the mirrors for spectroscopes. These mirrors are plane surfaces (usually) which have twenty-five thousand scratches to the inch or about twenty-five scratches to the hair's-breadth. These scratches are so fine that they can not be detected by the eye. To the uninitiated this seems to be a marvelous degree of accuracy but John A. Brashear would show him that the most absolutely plane surface that can be made would really be a portion of the surface of a sphere about the size of the moon.

This article does not begin to tell of the wonderful accuracy found in these plants but it should give the reader some idea of what is meant bythe expression "Instruments of Precision."

KAPPA SIGMAS ORGANIZE BIBLE STUDY CLASS.

Powell Leader.

Every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock a Bible Study Class meets at the Kappa Sigma House for a half hour's reading and discussion of the scripture.

This class was organized a short time ago because the members of the Fraternity realized that not only should particular emphasis be placed upon scholarship, literary society work, or athletics, but that some provision should be made for their spiritual enlightenment.

The class is composed of fifteen men, with Mr. Powell as leader. This year it will be associated with the Y. M. C. A. Bible Study Class conducted by Dr. Kern. The members of the class are taking a great deal of interest in this work; and they hope to derive much good from it.

BE CONSIDERATE.

If your name is misspelled in the Purple and White, or if some other mistake has been made, please don't run to the editor with it. He gets enough "cussin'." If an error has been made, pass over the mistake. None of us is perfect. We are all liable to make mistakes. No error in the Purple and White is made intentionally. It is simply a mistake that you would possibly make if you were on the staff.

Purpose of Article.

The editor does not intend these remarks to appeal to any particular person. But the purpose of this article is to ask the students not to unjustly criticise the editor of the paper. If some students were more inclined to help the paper than to criticise it, the Purple and White would be a greater and a more balanced sheet.

Be considerate. Don't be too quick to censure. If you see how the Purple and White can be made better, then, suggest some method by which this end may be accomplished. But, please don't be overbearing in your criticism. Put yourself in the places of those who are on the staff ,and you will realize that the responsibilities are great.

THE BOBASHELA.

The Seniors this year expect to get out a first class Bobashela, an Annual that will reflect honor on the college, and a volume that will be unsurpassed by any previous ones. Why not? Certainly, a better staff could not be found than those who have been elected by the Senior Class. Every one on the staff is competent to fill his or her place. And with the spirit they have begun with, the Bobashela should be a crowning success.

A Task.

Of course it is a task to get out an Annual. But it is a pleasant task for those who will soon complete their college work. As they stand on the threshold of the world that lies outside the college walls, and ere they leave their Alma Mater possibly to say goodbye ,they feel constrained to contemplate their college life once more and record their achievements. This is done in the Bobashela. The Seniors realize that it will take a great deal of work to get out the Bobashela this year, so they ask the co-operation of the student body. The annual is yours as well as theirs. So, help lighten the burden.

DR. WATKINS GIVES INTERESTING LECTURE AT CHAPEL.

Urges Students Not to Neglect Work.

There is much food for thought in the lecture which Dr. Watkins gave at chapel last Wednesday morning on students neglecting their work, and failing to do thoroughly each day's work as it comes around. He showed in a clear, able manner what the result will be to any student, who fails to perform his daily task well. His advice was wholesome and timely; and those fellows, who, as he said, are cutting classes, and spending a great deal of their time down town will have much cause for regret later on in their college career, when they find themselves confronted with the problem of having to carry extra burdens, or in other words making up work that should have been done at the beginning of their college course. The inevitable result of which will be spending extra time in college or what is worse still having to give up entirely all hopes of a college education.

No doubt, those who have been here at Millsaps for several years, and who have had some experience in making up back work could testify to the truthfulness of Dr. Watkins statements.

COURTESY AND EFFICIENT SERVICE FIRST.

This is the slogan of all the great railroad systems in America.

One doubtless inquires why it becomes necessary to impress upon the minds of railway employees the practical necessity of courtesy and efficient service always in the common performance of their duties, both to employer and the public. It is explained in the fact the sentiment of today is not what it was when these great systems were struggling, practically alone, in an effort for supremacy. The public mind years ago was unable to determine the spirit and motive of such enterprises. In the beginning, it assumed the spirit of pupil and master; the railroads active, and the public passive. Labor was content with its hire, and the public felt the blessings of enterprise. Both, in their commercial intercourse, played into each others' hands. Then the great combines and monopolies had not escaped from the box of human evils. It was more generally understood that one could not exist independent from the other.

As it appears today in the almost boundless panorama of railroad actively, this sentiment has changed from its former mildness to a state of bitter opposition. What reasons are there that would best suggest the cause for this? There is but one, independent of capital itself, that is able to penetrate to the truth through its complexity—the indifference of railway employees to the rights and property of the public. This indifference gradually practiced was not long in forming a chasm whose width could only be bridged by contact of railway and public in courtesy and efficient service always attending their transactions.

"Men do not gather figs of thistles." This example drawn from commercial life illustrates the rise and flourish of an evil that often exists in the experience of individuals in their contact with the social and business world. In the infancy of his career, a man often enters into active life conscious of human rights and obligations, but after repeated success he begins to deal lightly with that phase of his nature which must essentially determine what his ultimate efforts shall result in. A sadder picture cannot be presented than that of a man from whom have been wrested the friendship and confidence of his fellows. Every individual of our community and state, under the reign of law and protection, deserves the same courtesy that we would exact of him.

There is but little hope for the man who attempts success on the theory that his particular profession does not demand of him courtesy. This assumption interwoven, as it becomes, into the fabric of his character ushers him daily from the sympathy and assistance of the moral and social world. Imagine yourself robbed of the eternal evidence behind the scene, as you behold a natural world crowned with wonders. What man is there who can live in peace to himself? It is easy to form the chasm between you and those whom you have to deal with, but hard to bridge it with a patched reputation.

May it have its motto in courtesy and efficient service, that the balance of friendship and respect may be maintained. The world of today demands it; therefore, begin today. J. S. T.

C. H. A. WALLOPS FRENCH CAMP.

Snappy Football Game Attended By Large Crowd—Belhaven Girls Present.

Nov 1. Yesterday afternoon on the Millsaps athletic field, the football team from C. H. A. overwhelmingly defeated the French Camp squad by the score of 102-0. The game was too one-sided to be very interesting, but the large crowd of spectators, among which was a good representation from Belhaven, enjoyed the good team work of the C. H. A. team.

This one fact, that of team work, tells the whole story. French Camp had very little, if any, team work. They had some good players and with the proper amount of team work they would be a strong team. Robinson and Browning did the best work for their team. Their tackling was sure and hard and if all their team mates had supported them up, the score would have been different.

But the C. H. A. team acted as one man. They had team work all the way through and this together with the fact that they had several individual stars, accounts for the large score which they piled up. Their interference was fine, equal to that of any team in the state.

Straus—(To a lady friend): "Have you studied Geom?"

L. F.—"Of course I have."

Straus—"Well then, what is the shape of a kiss?"

L. F.—"Why should I know, I don't indulge, but—but—please what is it?"

Straus—"Well, just give me one and I will call it square."

GEOLOGY CLASS TAKES TRIP TO COLUMBUS.

which the I. I. & C. girls had prepared. After this was enjoyed to the fullest extent, some photographs were taken, illustrating both the topography and the historical geography of this region. Those who had never seen Plymouth Bluff before were amazed that there was such a place, remarkable both for its beauty and splendid geological features. On descending the bluff about thirty feet there is an indurated ledge some fifteen to twenty feet broad that has been left exposed by the erosion and the caving in of the softer sands above. This ledge is described in Hilgarde's "Geology of Mississippi" as the Inoceranus ledge on account of the abundance of the fossil oyster shells of this variety which it contains. A large ammonite was found here. Some ten feet below a similar ledge projects and the two may be seen running parallel dipping towards the river for about half a mile.

Late in the afternoon tired, but happy with the memories and the trophies of the day, the young geologists retraced their steps to the wagon. All the way home the I. I. & C. girls showed their fine college spirit by their yells and college songs.

Friday morning the visiting students were taken on an exploration tour through the college buildings and campus. Mr. Allred, with his usual affable manner, proved to be quite popular with the young ladies in blue uniforms. When the kitchen was explored everything (that is, the food) looked so tempting, it was with considerable difficulty that Dr. Sullivan was coaxed from the attractions of the kitchen.

Dr. Sullivan and his class arrived at A. & M. College about twelve o'clock Friday and Professor Geiger took him to the mess hall where a very appetizing dinner had been prepared for them. Later on they explored a portion of the campus which is rich in Gastropods, Placypods, Mollusks and other fossils. We understand one co-ed found a Belemnite.

Professor Geiger robbed the greenhouse of several large yellow chrysanthemums and presented one to each co-ed.

The trip was made with scarcely a mishap except that Mr. Rankin got a cinder in his eye on the way to Columbus but since there was a skilled surgeon in the class, namely, Dr. Lovelace, the cinder was soon extracted and under Miss Loeb's tender care, Mr. Rankin was soon himself again.

Those who went on the trip trip were: Patti Sullivan, Pauline Boatner, Lucile Stewart, Frances Loeb, Jeanette Lovelace, Otie Branstetter, Howard Rankin, Herbert Babington, Judson Allred, Alfred Bending, Emmett Ratliff and Dr. Sullivan.

Russell was debating the question of Sunday Work in Bible Thursday:

"What about milking on Sunday?"

"I am no calf," was the curt reply from the Doctor.

This story would seem to show that colored people have tough heads:

Dinah, crying bitterly, was coming down the street with her feet bandaged.

"Why, what on earth's the matter?" she was asked. "How did you hurt your feet, Dinah?"

"Dat good fo' nothin' nigger (sniffle) done hit me on de haid wif a club while I was standin' on de hard stone pavement."

Hits and Misses.

F. Irving Fletcher said on one of his famous golf speeches:

"I have learned two things in my time—I have learned to run an automobile and I have learned to play golf.

"While learning to run an automobile I hit everything, whereas while learning to play golf I hit nothing."

A LAMENT.

I shall soon be steeped in sadness,
All my happy moments flown;
"Darling of my heart, my gladness,
Oh come back to me," I'll moan,
Rather every rose be ruining,
Every star fall from above;
Yet, you'll surely be returning.
Oh, in truth, I still shall love,
You, my sweetheart, you, my love.

A colored parson, calling upon one of his flock, found the object of his visit out in the back yard working among his hen coops. He noted with surprise that there were no chickens.

"Why, Brudder Brown," he asked, "wha-r all yo' chickens?"

"Huh," grunted Bro. Brown, without looking up, "some fool niggah lef' de do' open an' dey all went home."

Again the Freshmen come to the front. A new student, Yarber, from Louisville, has joined their ranks.

The liberal offer made by the Royal Cigar Stand to cash our checks without charging exchange is the best yet.

Calvin Wells, a former Millsaps student, has been recently elected Secretary of Student Body at Washington-Lee.

Now most of the elections are over maybe "Dame Politics" will be satisfied with a seat in the gallery.

Of course we all went to the Fair, and it was a wonder that anybody had any money to see the circus, but a good many went.

The boys who run the Royal Cigar Stand are College men, they know how to please and they deserve our patronage.

A very marked degree of interest was shown in the irregular debate in the G. L. S. Wooten and Feibelman made good talks.

T. M. Ainsworth, B. D., led the Preachers' League last Thursday night. He is one of the most fluent men on the campus next to Terry.

When "Rat" went to Columbus with the Geology Class he couldn't decide which school he liked the better, Millsaps or I. I. & C.

In a very close and exiciting game of football, the teams representing Jackson High School and Canton High School battled to a 6 to 6 tie. The teams were pretty evenly matched, but the ball was in Jackson territory through the greater part of the game. The feature of the game was the 50 yard run of Jiggitts, Canton's right half, for a touchdown in the first quarter.

THIS DOES NOT APPLY TO OLD AGE

Most people under forty years of age do not wear glasses to improve vision, but to get relief from pain and suffering in one form or another, brought on by the ceaseless struggle of the complicated muscular system of the eyes. The brain demands clear images and the nerves and muscles under the whiplash of this demand overcome errors in the formation of the eyeballs (Errors of refraction), by an intense muscular action, which we term eyestrain.

The object of lenses then is to correct the error by adding to or taking from the refractive system of the eyeball, thus doing the work in front of the eye and thereby permitting the eye to see with its nerves and muscles at rest.

Every case is a law unto itself, and the practitioner must have a thorough knowledge of this intricate visual apparatus in order to meet and overcome the various and varied optical phenomina.

Mississippi College should be congratulated on being fortunate enough to have The Jackson Daily News' support relative to the recent Mississippi-Tulane football game. The Jackson paper blamed Tulane for the fight.

"When thou goest to buy some tobacco and rememberest that thy brother hath naught to eat, first go and feed thy brother and then go and buy thy tobacco; and verily thou shalt enjoy it, and no man shall say naught against thee." A parody by "Tinkey."

A judge, disgusted with a jury that seemed unable to reach an agreement in a perfectly evident case, rose and said, "I discharge this jury."

One sensitive talesman, indignant at what he considered a rebuke, obstinately faced the judge.

"You can't discharge me," he said in tones of one standing upon his rights.

"And why not?" asked the surprised judge.

"Because," announced the juror, pointing to the lawyer for the defense, "I'm being hired by that man there!"

A pessimistic young man dining alone in a restaurant ordered broiled live lobster. When the waiter put it on the table it was obviously minus one claw. The pessimistic young man promptly kicked.

The waiter said it was unavoidable—there had been a fight in the kitchen between two of the lobsters. The other one had torn off one of the claws of this one and had eaten it. The young man pushed the lobster away from him.

"Take it away," he said, wearily, "and bring me a winner."

The Board of Editors is glad that the student body is taking such an interest in the paper by contributing to its columns and by subscribing for it. Let the good work go on.
